Les Abeilles “The Bees”
Les Abeilles “The Bees” is named for these mysterious creatures that inhabit the vineyards where this Côtes du Rhône is produced. The Colombo family keeps their own beehives in the Rhône Valley and their appreciation for the natural environment creates an atmosphere in which insects, animals and grape vines co-exist and flourish. This can only be accomplished with sustainable vineyard practices where no harsh pesticides are used.

Honeybees pollinate more than 90% of flowering crops – including many of the fruits, vegetables, nuts and spices we eat. In many places around the world, however, bee colonies are in severe jeopardy. “Colony Collapse Disorder” is a mysterious 8-year-old crisis – and it’s worsening at an alarming rate. The cause is unknown, and it has currently spread to over half of the United States, with similar collapses reported in Brazil, Canada and parts of Europe.
